BLUE MOON CAMERA AND MACHINE TO PRODUCE SUBMINIATURE FILMS FOR MINOX CAMERAS

Blue Moon Camera and Machine in Portland, Oregon is one of the few remaining labs dedicated to film and analog photography, and one of the last optical printing labs in the country. This month, the store adds to its array of services the production and sale of fresh subminiature 8x11mm film fit for MINOX cameras, branded under the name "Spy Film". MINOX Germany will make Blue Moon Camera the North American licensed manufacturing and distribution hub for subminiature films.

MINOX has produced finely made and precise cameras for subminiature (ultra small) film since 1937. Due to this precision, most MINOX cameras are still operable, viable, and desirable, but without film can only serve as paper weights and conversation pieces. After a long interruption in production, MINOX, gmbh has licensed Blue Moon Camera and Machine as the MINOX film production hub for North America. The resumption of film production will enable all MINOX owners to once again utilize these elegant subminiature cameras.

The initial offering of film will be available in a variety of negative emulsions, including but not limited to both black and white films and color films, in either 100 ASA or 400 ASA.

In addition to film production, Blue Moon Camera also offers lab services, including the development, printing, and scanning of MINOX-sized films. Sample prints and a detailed list of services can be found on the Blue Moon Camera website, specifically at this address:

Orders can be placed and will be filled immediately, and the film will be available for sale indefinitely. If you would like more information, you can contact us by email (sales@bluemooncamera.com) or call into the shop (503.978.0333). Thank you.
